Classroom Implications: Tailoring instruction based on proficiency

What does this look like in face-to-face classroom?

What does this look like in a digital environment?

- Give directions thoughtfully:
 - Am I using simple language?
 - If I make a video, am I speaking slowly?
 - Are my instructions familiar to students? Are they similar to the routines of the classroom or am I constantly changing formats and throwing something new at my students?
 - Am I providing repeated exposure? Am I giving instructions both orally and in writing?
 - Helpful Hint: Remind.com and other texting services give teachers the ability to record short voice texts in addition to written texts. These are especially helpful if your students or parents are not yet literate in English.
 - Am I providing a visual model of what I want students to produce?

In-Person

- Identifying the needs of your EBs
- Grouping according to language levels
- Academic language supports (word walls, sentence frames, visuals, word banks, translations, etc.)

Hybrid Mix of in-person and virtual

- Identifying the needs of your EBs (home language environment)
- Academic language supports (word walls, sentence frames, visuals, word banks, translations, etc.)

Virtual

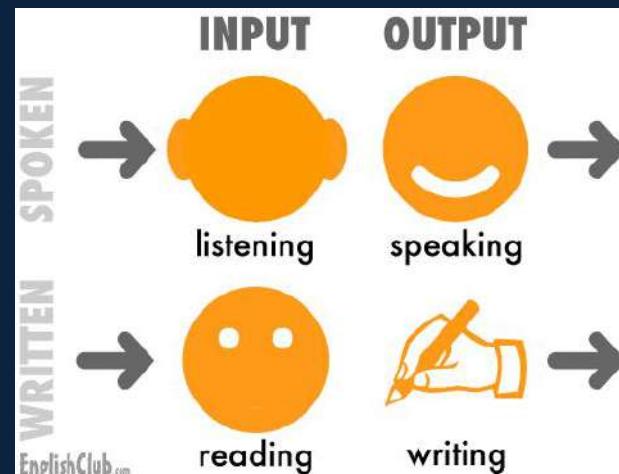

- Identifying the needs of your EBs (home language environment)
- Routines, assignments, and directions on level
- Clear and modeled directions
- Adaptive software
- TRACKING

Core Instructional Practice #2

Teachers provide students opportunities to practice all four language domains during instruction

Four Domains of Language

Receptive Language - listening, reading

Expressive Language - speaking, writing

In-Person

- Oral Language Strategies
 - Cooperative Learning
 - Timed Pair Share
 - Rally Coach
 - Discourse Frames

 - Connecting/ Building
 - Praising
 - Greeting/ Salutation
- Oral Practice before writing
 - Heavy modeling & coaching
 - Start with class building topics before transitioning to academic content

Hybrid: Mix of in-person and virtual

- Oral Language Strategies
 - Cooperative Learning
 - Whole class meetings in place of table work
 - Be strategic with online platforms & specialists
 - Discourse Frames
 - Assign them as homework to practice with parents or siblings
- Oral Practice before writing
 - Empower students to do this independently at home

Virtual

- Oral Language Strategies
 - Assign and model fluency passages
 - Allow students to record themselves
 - Cooperative Learning
 - Breakout rooms
 - Discourse frames
 - Prioritize depth over breadth
- Oral Practice before writing

Cooperative Learning: Rally Coach

-Partner Work with
'sneeze-guards'

-Routine timers

- Partner work with peer coaching

Cooperative Learning: Timed Pair Share

- Six feet apart
- Clear expectations & sentence frames

- Oral practice before writing
